PROMINENT CITIZEN DEAD

Vernon Faulkner died at his home near Stanton, Powell county, Friday, October 20th, after an extended illness of stomach trouble. He was born July 25, 1861 and was a member of the Christian church at Stanton for many years, and was a man who will be greatly missed by his neighbors and friends. He is survived by his widow who was before her marriage, Mrs. Vina West, of this county; three daughters, Mrs. Sylvia Burton, Mrs. Morton Crow, Miss Ennis Faulkner; one son, Clegg Faulkner; one step-daughter, Mrs. Goodloe Spurlock, of Texas, and two brothers, Logan, of Powell county, and Lloyd, of Winchester.

Vernon Faulkner was a man always ready to do all he could to help any one in need and lived in the fear of God, and was not afraid to die.

Funeral services were held at his home Saturday and his body laid to rest in the Faulkner burying ground. We miss thee from our home, dear Vernon.

We miss thee from thy place. A shadow o'er our life is cast, We miss the sunshine of thy face. We miss thy kind and willing hand, Thy fond and earnest care. Our home is dark without thee, We miss thee every where.

FORD WRECKED

Russell Cox, of this city, livestock buyer, was badly bruised yesterday in an automobile accident which occurred shortly before noon, on the Paris pike. Mr. Cox, who was driving his Ford touring car had made a purchase of a calf and was bringing it to this city when a man walking into town was asked to ride.

The animal became unruly and alarmed the stranger who grabbed the steering wheel and upset the car, which rolled over into the ditch. The two men were considerably bruised and scratched, and the car badly smashed up. Mr. Cox says "No more Good Samaritan business for me."

The Red Cross will start a drive in this city and county November 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th.

MISS McNAMARA HONORED

CROP ROTATIONS NEEDED TO BUILD UP WORN SOILS

Farming practices that have been followed in Kentucky in the past have put many farmers of the state in need of a crop rotation system that will build up their worn soils, according to R. E. Stephenson, soils specialist of the College of Agriculture. In diversified farming, which is most common in Kentucky, it is hard to make soils richer or even keep up the fertility which they already contain without a good system of rotating crops. At the present time few farmers in the state use a rotation, but the number is increasing as better farmers are being developed. Kentucky needs rotations that provide for more legumes and, on the rougher lands, more grass and clovers.

Some of the things that a good rotation should provide for are: 1—About the same acreage of each crop every year. 2—One or more cash crops. 3—Hay crop. 4—In most cases, a sod-forming crop that will last for several years. 5—One or more legumes. 6—The alternation of tilled and untilled crops. 7—The alternation of deep and shallow-rooted crops. 8—Crops that will distribute labor, save equipment and cut down the amount of supervision that is necessary. 9—The planting of crops in the best order to control insects and plant diseases. 10—The keeping of livestock. 11—The use of manure on the profitable crop. 12—Some crop on the land at all times. 13—The use of by-products to prevent waste.

The most common rotations run for three, four and five years or else for an indefinite length of time. A common three-year rotation includes corn or tobacco followed by wheat or some other small grain and then clover and grass. Corn, oats and clover is not uncommon in some section. A common four-year rotation in the state is corn, soybeans or cowpeas, wheat or other small grain and clover or grass. Some farmers lengthen the rotation one year by leaving grass and clover for a year longer and using it for pasture.

"On land that washes badly, good farmers use a rotation that allows for a clover or grass crop from year to year. In this case the land is broken from soil only often enough to renew the stand of grass or clover and only one or two cultivated crops are grown in succession.

The Right Rev. Sir David Hunter Blair tells a story of a colleague, a bishop, who rode out on a long round of leaving calls, attended by a new groom.

Before setting out the bishop had sent the man back to the house to get some cards. When they reached the last house the order was: "Leave two cards here, James."

The unexpected reply of the groom was: "I can't, my lord. There's only the act of spades left." Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The writer of this must have owned one: "City men seeking a picturesque farm should be content if it so much as pays taxes." Some of them don't do that.

Something to Worry About: A reformer is a human being who wants everybody to be better than he is.

"Feeling Fine!"

"I was pale and thin, hardly able to go," says Mrs. Bessie Bearden, of Central, S. C. "I would suffer when I stood on my feet, with bearing-down pains in my sides and the lower part of my body. I did not rest well and didn't want anything to eat. My color was bad and I felt miserable. A friend of mine told me of

CARDU

and I then remembered my mother used to take it. After the first bottle I was better. I began to flesh up and regained my strength and good, healthy color. I am feeling fine. I took twelve bottles of Cardu and haven't had a bit of trouble since."

Thousands of other women have had similar experiences in the use of Cardu, which has brought relief where other medicines had failed.

If you suffer from female ailments, take Cardu, which is a woman's medicine. It may be just what you need.

THE WORLD OF SUN AND BLUE SKY

NOW when the Navajos eliminated from the world of darkness into the world of moon and stars they were very happy, and for many years they flourished and prospered under the guidance and leadership of their great chief, Chis-Chi-E-Go.

All the warriors and the elders of the tribe, who had lived in darkness for many years, rejoiced at the new twilight they had found, and were content to rest in this world in peace and happiness. They planted their crops and fished in the streams and hunted in the mountains and valleys, and reared their families in the light of the moon and the stars.

But so it happened that years passed, and the elders of the tribe died, and the younger men became leaders—and they were discontented and unhappy, and they began to seek about for new worlds and new streams and new forests.

There was in this world of twilight a great lake, and in the center of the lake was a great lily that grew and grew until no man could see the top and only the whiteness of the moonlight on its enormous petals was reflected for the tribesmen to see. The Navajos watched the lily, and saw it grow, and they were curious, but none among them was brave enough to swim the lake or climb the lily stalk.

But finally there came a young man as chief, the great grandson of Chis-Chi-E-Go, and he was very brave and very venturesome. Seeing the sadness and discontent of his people in the land of twilight and shadow, his heart was sore oppressed and he determined to find a new world where happiness would come to everyone. So for days he prayed to the Great Father for advice, and in his prayers came the vision of a new world where there was great light and warmth, and where there were days and nights—a land of green fields and wooded hills.

So, bidding his people wait for him, he jumped into the lake and swam to the great lily stem, and this he entered and the door closed behind him. And inside the lily stalk he found a great hall leading upward and upward, and this he climbed. For days and days he continued to climb until he was nearly exhausted for he had brought no food and no drink and the climb was long and tiresome. But finally one day he looked up and saw light, and so he pushed on upward and upward, until he stepped out from the lily stalk into a lily blossom.

The lily blossom lay in the middle of a great lake, and the lake was situated in a new world—a world of sunshine and green trees. There it was that the Navajo chieftain first saw the sun, and when he saw the great father of fire he was frightened and amazed, and he fell on his face and worshipped it, and gave thanks for the new world which he had found.

When he arose and swam to the shore he found a world of happiness and content; warmed by the rays of the father sun, where birds sang and animals played in the fields, and flowers bloomed and everything was gay.

Then, like his great grandfather, he renounced his own people, and taking food from the trees and the streams he went back through the lily stalk to the land of twilight, and there he called the tribesmen about him and told of the discovery he had made. Many of the people believed him, but some did not, and there was much discussion. But finally the tribe decided to divide, and those who were brave and strong started for the new world, but those who were weak or old, or afraid, remained behind in the world of twilight.

So the young chief and his party started out, and they climbed the lily stalk and came into the world of sunshine and warmth, and like their chief they fell on their faces and thanked the Father Sun for the new world which he had given them.

So it was that the Navajos came into the world of sunshine which they know today—and when they had come here then they planted their crops, and built their homes, and tended their herds even as they do unto this day.

But those who were weak and afraid, and who had remained behind were lost forever—for when the tribe had ascended to the new world then the great lily dried up and disappeared, and where it had grown there was only a mammoth mountain, shutting off forever the road to the land of twilight. To this day the ones who remained behind have never been seen more.

Today the Navajo mothers, when their children are frightened or bad, tell them the story of the land of twilight—and the cries are hushed and the naughtiness forgotten under the threat that they will be sent back to live forever in a land of semi-darkness with the lost tribe that is no more.

It Pays to Own a Mutual Fountain

WHY YOU WANT IT

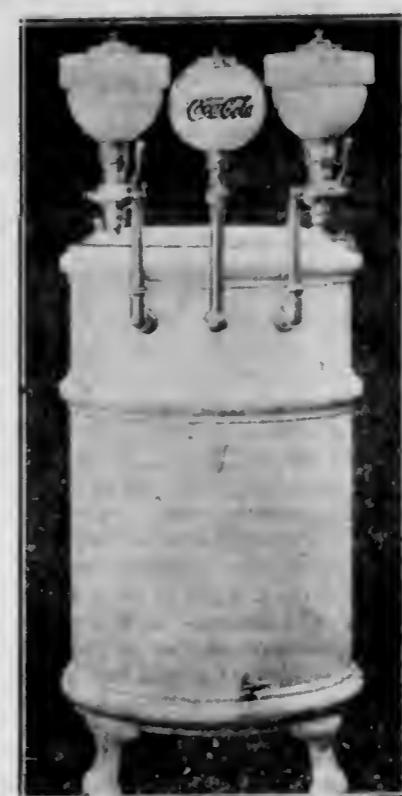

Assuming that you are a merchant who sells soft drinks, we say unreservedly that you really cannot afford to be without a MUTUAL FOUNTAIN.

WHY? Because PROFITS is the magic word that turns the wheel. A simple sum in arithmetic—no dream; no ifs; no theory. With a MUTUAL FOUNTAIN, instead of making twenty cents per dozen on cold drinks, you make FORTY CENTS—and this takes care of your ice bill and does away with the lost and broken containers which you have to pay out of your profits. You have your ornamental fountain in your store, occupying a space of but 22 inches in circumference and four feet high. You have with the fountain an ice box, as well as one icing, but a hundred and fifty pounds of ice lasts about eight days.

Every drink is properly proportioned and you know exactly how many nickels you get from each gallon of syrup.

To the customer the Mutual Fountain appeals from a sanitary standpoint; from the standpoint that his drink is ice cold without having ice in the drink. No ammonia, no sawdust, no filth—absolute cleanliness. The customer knows he is getting a drink properly proportioned; he gets it from a sanitary paper cup instead of from a container which has been exposed to unsanitary conditions.

GROWERS CANNOT SIGN UP
1922 CROP AFTER NOV. 6

Tobacco growers who may remain out of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association with a view to testing the loose leaf markets, and, if they find the prices at auction not high enough, bringing their tobacco to the burley association to be sold, will find themselves "out of luck," according to a statement from President and General Manager J. C. Stone.

The statement is contained in a letter to Buford E. Allen, chairman of the organization in Fayette county, and was given in reply to an inquiry from Mr. Allen as to whether the date of November 6, set by the board of directors of the association as the closing day for the books this year would be observed.

In his letter President Stone says that the date set by the directors of the association is final and that no contracts will be received after November 6 on this year's crop. The letter in full follows:

"Dear Mr. Allen: Replying to your inquiry as to whether or not any one will be allowed to join the association after the closing day we have set, November 6, will say that if any grower wants his year's crop handled through the association it will be absolutely necessary for him to sign the contract before November 6.

"We are not going to allow the man on the outside to see how the loose leaf markets open and, if he does not like the prices, bring his tobacco to the association.

"This decision is final and I would be glad for you to give this information to your organization."

LEARN TO SAVE

Officials of the savings division of the treasury department, on the eve of the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, are pointing to his famous utterance, "If you are sure you are beginning right, begin to save," as a worthy slogan to be used in the sale of treasury savings certificates.

The anniversary of Roosevelt's birth again brings to the attention of the public the important part he played in making the people of the United States more thrifty. Because of his efforts to instill economy and to create a desire on the part of the public to save, the government has used Colonel Roosevelt's picture on its $25 treasury savings certificates.

In discussing the redemption of the 1918 war savings stamps the latter part of this year, treasury department officials state that they are very desirous that the public either reinvest this money in treasury savings certificates or consult with their local bank or building and loan officials regarding the reinvestment of this money, with the idea that the gigantic sum to be returned to the people of this district will not fall into the hands of unscrupulous salesmen of securities of doubtful value, but may be used either by the government or in aiding the general prosperity of individual communities.

The new $25 Roosevelt certificates can be bought at or through any post office at $20.50 each. Similar certificates of $100 and $1,000 denominations can be bought at $82 and $820 each, respectively.

SATURDAY WILL BE "FORGET-ME-NOT DAY"

If we forgotten so soon? 300,000 wounded and disabled American boys, veterans of the recent world war, are scattered over these United States, bearing mute remembrances of the sacrifices they made in the service of their flag and country. "Forget-Me-Not Day," to be observed next Saturday, November 4th, offers a grateful public a unique and pleasant opportunity, to enable these disabled veterans to re-establish themselves as useful citizens. True, the Government is striving to adjust their medical cases and compensation claims, but the unwieldy machinery of Uncle Sam's official activities has not served in the expeditious manner that it should, nor have urgent and particularly needy cases been handled satisfactorily. The "Forget-Me-Not Day" campaign is intended to permit the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, a national organization with over 100,000 of the wounded and disabled men within its ranks, to take care of these urgent cases.

In addition, groups of the disabled veterans will be enabled to establish clubhouses and summer camps for their chapters; national legislative measures in behalf of the disabled men will be carried through on a considerably larger scale; they will be given an opportunity to restore themselves to civilian status, and again become independent, valuable citizens. These are a few of the many worthy objectives of "Forget-Me-Not Day."

Here in the city of Mt. Sterling, we are to participate in "Forget-Me-Not Day" the same as in several hundred of other cities and towns around the country. Our response must be generous, typical of this city; and given in a manner that will show sincere, grateful appreciation of the services of these, the nation's real heroes, the men for whom we said only a few years ago, nothing would be too good. Let's be fair with ourselves—bave we seen them through, as we promised? Next Saturday, November 4, "Forget-Me-Not Day," shows the way. And let's go "over the top" again thrice 100 per cent.

WHAT SHALL IT BE?

Democrats, we appeal to you to exercise your right of suffrage in the approaching congressional race. Mr. Fields has been tried. He is a representative of the people, true to those principles that bring about the greatest good to the greatest number. He is on record as the farmer's friend—don't forget this farmers! In the present tobacco organization by which the tobacco growers are receiving a just recompense for their product, Mr. Fields has had voice and his influence and power has been for the class that earn their living by the sweat of the brow.

Prohibitionists, don't forget that he is your friend, that he is part and parcel of you, that he can be trusted on this question, now of greatest moment, the enemies of which are seeking at this very time to overthrow. Prohibitionists, take no chances, women of this commonwealth, this subject deeply interests you, you have borne the burden, the sorrow, the humility that comes through the saloon. Mr. Fields has proven himself an aggressor, fearlessly and with much boldness and courage in the struggle, aiding in that national enactment that gave us a bone dry nation. Show your colors women, by voting for the man you know to be the women's friend.

Mr. Fields' opponent is an untried individual. He doubtless would line up with the present do-nothing congress, seeking only a nation's political power. To vote for him is only to take a chance. You can vote for Mr. Fields with a proven assurance that he will contend to the last ditch for the people's interest, and for your greatest good. For every law that is for the advancement of morals and the correction of vices Mr. Fields is a firm, a true and tried exponent. Don't be kept away from the polls, for now is the time to stand firm, to show yourselves mighty in the protection of the present and coming generation. Register and vote!

In the late 70's a local society gave a banquet for the members of a certain regiment noted for gallant conduct during the Civil War.

The president of the society was a bit flustered when called upon to give a toast and said: "Here's to the gallant 18th—last on the field and the first to leave it."

It was a time of laughter and the secretary arose.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "our president never could give a toast. You must excuse him. Now, I'll give a toast. Here's to the gallant 18th—equal to none!"—Los Angeles Express.

BILLIE BROWNIE'S PERMISSION

"I do think it was ever so good of you," said Billie Brownie to Mother Nature, "to let me talk to your children. I've enjoyed hearing their different stories and talking to the different ones at various times during the different months."

"They were so good about telling me their stories. They talked and laughed and were gay and witty and bright, but they always told me real facts about themselves which I liked immensely."

"And when it was January, the January creatures talked to me, and when it was February the February ones did—so that it was all so nice, and fitting to the season."

"I must tell you, Mother Nature, of how interested I have been in the ones I have met this summer and fall."

"I will tell you about only a few of them, as I know how busy you always are."

"But I want to let you know what a good time I have had, and how very, very, very deeply I thank you for giving me permission to call on your children and asking them to tell me their stories."

"You are very welcome, Billie Brownie," said Mother Nature.

"I am only too glad to give permission to others to call on my children and hear their stories. And anyone can soon learn the language of my children by watching them and studying them and loving them."

"Then it seems as though what they were doing begins to sound in your ears like words—wasn't that the way it was with you, Billie Brownie?"

"The very way," said Billie Brownie.

"I am delighted to hear that my children were polite. Of course, every mother is much interested in manners."

"Oh, they were fine—fine in every way," said Billie Brownie.

"Well, I visited the Butterflies, I met many different families and I heard family histories."

"I heard how they spin their cocoons, how the different ones change into different butterflies we see, what they all do in the winter, how some of them live in the caterpillar state."

"I met an up-to-date little caterpillar who said he always slept with a hole at either end of his tiny bed so he would get air."

"Another family told me that they made their dining-room table and bed out of the same leaf."

"Then, there were those named after tigers and those named after zebras, and they were very proud of these funny sounding names."

"They all told me how they ate and what they ate, and of the schooling they had in preparing themselves to be butterflies we see about us."

"Then they told me how they hated nets—oh, how cruel they did think nets were."

"And they said they could not understand how anyone would want to catch a little butterfly and watch his wings droop after he had struggled so sadly in vain!"

"I met a Jack O'Lantern, too. He was grinning and smiling, and he told me that he was so proud because you let him and other members of his family take part in Halloween celebrations."

"Then I met any number of creatures getting ready to go to bed, the Woodchucks, the Prairie Dogs, the Frogs, and the Snakes and lots of others."

"I had a little chat with Grandfather Turkey. 'Ready to Go to Bed.'"

"And oh, Mother Nature, I think your children are wonderful, the most wonderful in the world!"

"So do I," said Mother Nature. "But what mother doesn't think her children are the most wonderful in the world?" she smiled.

At Sixes and Sevens

The expression is a corruption of the old term used in playing dice (i. e., to wager on five and six, the highest possible throws). Its first meaning was to stake everything on one hazard, and from that it got to imply recklessness and carelessness, from which the modern idea of "disorder" came. The expression was originally "to set on six and seven," and it was not till the eighteenth century that the plural form came into general use.

THE FARMERS' TRIUMPH

The formation of the American Tobacco Growers' Exchange creates an agency of national force for the protection of the men who produce the burley and dark leaf which until recently has been at the mercy of the buyers. The formation of the Inter-Cooperative Conference Committee is a step which carries the tobacco growers into the organization of cooperative handling farm products in general.

The day of the one-gallus farmer, of competitive selling, of starvation return for arduous labor, of poor roads and cheap schools, of discouragement and failure has departed. The bridge from poverty and ignorance to comfort and education has been erected. The means of united action through able representation supply the keystone to the archway over the river of doubt.

Thus is solved the problem that politicians never could solve. Practical every legislative office-seeker in America has made promises to the farmer. The promises began as soon as it became evident that the manufacturers who were buying raw products were forming price arrangements. Until the co-operative plan was put in shape for practical operation nothing tangible for the relief of the farmer was offered and it was tried out. The result was always the same. The taxes on land increased as the prices of farm products went down.

Agriculture has been making wonderful progress. Invention put machines to work where men had toiled. With each improvement came harder competition among the producers. Progress was real, but it brought paradoxical hardships.

Under co-operative methods farmers can be protected from buyers' agreements. They can demand and receive a fair division of the profits of investment and labor. They become business men and cease to be the victims of combinations against their interests.

The foreign interests represented in the buying are naturally opposed to the farmers' co-operative movement. Being opposed, they make a fight. But this sort of opposition can be checked at the source. The foreign nations have other interests besides those of tobacco buyers. Intelligent representations, backed by strong noisy in America can dissolve opposition coming from abroad. The fact is, the fight is won.—Louisville Times.

FARMERS FAVOR PLANS FOR BETTER POULTRY

Scores of requests for the certification of poultry flocks that have been received in the last few weeks by the College of Agriculture from farmers in every part of the state indicate that Kentucky poultry raisers are anxious to better the quality of their stock and breed their hens so they will lay more eggs, according to J. H. Martin, in charge of the college poultry work. Four flocks in the state already have been certified since the work was started a few weeks ago by the college poultrymen. A total of about 50 farmers and poultrymen have made requests to have their birds certified.

The certification of poultry flocks as it is being carried out at the present time involves two points by which it is hoped the quality of poultry in the state can be improved and the egg production of flocks increased. The first of these points is the picking out and marking of the best laying hens in the flock and mating them with a good cockerel to furnish a special breeding pen. The second point in certification is the distribution of cockerels and hatching eggs from these breeding pens to other farmers of the state so that they can get a difficult start in improving flocks.

John Reid, Owensboro, is the owner of the first flock to be certified in the state. His White Leghorns were examined by H. R. Jackson, poultry extension specialist of the college, and 34 hens picked out as the best ones to be used in the breeding pen. Eight Barred Plymouth Rocks from the flock of Mrs. W. O. Kirk, Philipot, were put in the breeding pen on this farm, while 12 Barred Plymouth Rocks were picked out of the flock belonging to Mrs. W. H. Dickson, Sonora, to make up her breeding pen. The largest flock that has been certified up to the present time belongs to A. J. Cuiver, Hopkinsville, 116 of his White Leghorns being selected to make up the breeding pen. Hens in each of these pens will be mated with male birds that have trap nest records behind them or that have come from flocks that have made records in producing eggs.

Ready to Go to Bed.

"Then I met any number of creatures getting ready to go to bed, the Woodchucks, the Prairie Dogs, the Frogs, and the Snakes and lots of others."

"I had a little chat with Grandfather Turkey. 'Ready to Go to Bed.'"

"And oh, Mother Nature, I think your children are wonderful, the most wonderful in the world!"

"So do I," said Mother Nature. "But what mother doesn't think her children are the most wonderful in the world?" she smiled.

THE BAND CONCERT

The band brayed loudly where the blinding light Beat back the encroaching loveliness of night,
And boys with hot moist pennies in their hands
Swarmed fierce about the whistling peanut stands.
The old were quiet underneath the trees,
And children ran, but, oh, beyond all these Bright Adolescence claimed the summer hour
And wore brief romance like a scarlet flower
Where round and round the slow procession moved Through light and shadow, lover and beloved.
In the kind night each dull unlovely face
Took on a hint or wistful borrowed grace,
And dusk was kind to the too fine attire,
Moulding a beauty to the soul's desire
Out of the tawdry effort to be fair.
Shrill laughter drifted on the quiet
air,
And Love went by, alone amid the crowd,
Wordless and awed and pitiful and prond.

—The Measure.

TRAIL'S END

I used to think old age a desert land,
A place of broken dreams and faint desires,
Of vanished friendships and of lonely days—
The banked gray ashes of life's early fires,
But now, as lightly down my footsteps go Into that valley which they say is drear,
I find the banks are blue with violets
And all the springtime birds are singing here!

I used to think that my heart would be so sad
Twould spill its tears to see another smile,
But I am still a child of Laughter
Town,
Gay as the friend who walks with me
by miles!
I learn Soul is as ageless as the dawn,
That all love's messengers around me
sing
So walk serenely in a pleasant path,
Fall is the gentle replica of spring.

THE LAY OF THE REFORMER

I am the man with the gaff. Look out for me! I'm a regular whirlwind on a spree. I'm after your scalp, and after your hide, and everything else you've got beside. I growl, I howl, I scowl, I prowl, I'm foul, but I bury the fact in the song I sing, and I drown the fact in a dingdong-ding that pleases the ear of a dingdong crowd, that loves n noise both his and lond. I glare, I swear, I tear, I bare, I bare the faults I find in women and men. In puddles of gore I dip my pen, for every laugh I have n jeer. From every smile I wring a tear. I'm rough, I'm tough, I'm gruff,

I bluff and stuff the "common people" with a lot of goo, and things of my unholy brew; do I think I'll ever shovel coal? No, not I. But perhaps

IF IT FITS—

Every wise girl knows the way to encourage a lover to be discourage him. No man likes to catch a girl who falls too easily for him.

No housewife would mind the housework much if it wasn't for getting the meals, washing the dishes, doing the cleaning and hearing her husband growl about getting his own breakfast.

A good many good girls don't "leave home" because they are not pretty or popular enough for wicked men to tempt them.

When a man is with a lot of other men who are telling some of the wild escapades of their youth he always feels ashamed to think of how good he was in his younger days. But he doesn't feel that way when his wife gets to digging up facts about his past life.

One of the biggest fools in the world is the poor fish who thinks no-toriety is fame.

The average eligible bachelor has collected so many selfish ways he isn't always desirable—unless he has collected plenty of money, too.

The bashful lover needn't worry these days. There is nothing bashful about the modern girl, and she'll see that he gets the ring if she wants him badly enough.

Before marriage a girl puts everything in her hope chest, but after she has been married a while about the only things she gets are those that have to go into the medicine chest.

Friends may be shocked at the news of an elopement, but they never are so badly shocked they can't yell "Glory" at the thought of the price of the wedding present they have been saved by it.

Critics may judge a play by the plot and the acting, but it always is a good show to the men in the front rows if the chorus girls show enough.

When a man reads the inane love letters published during a divorce trial it discourages any idea he may have had about going to court for a legal separation.

ORDER RELEASE OF RUM SHIP

The Canadian schooner Emerald, recently seized off the Jersey coast by American prohibition agents, was ordered released by the government in the wake of the official announcement by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that the seizure was a "blunder." This action was exclusively forecast in news dispatches a week ago. It was expected that the American government will promptly admit that the seizure was illegal and dispatch a note to the British government apologizing for the seizure and expressing regret over the incident. This government, it was said, admitted that the prohibition agents were in error.

So it is instead of the administration saying, "We erred," saddles the blunder on the prohibition organization, thereby discrediting the influence of this party to the glory of the liquor following.

JAZZ PERIOD IS PASSING

The period of jazz which started at the close of the world war gradually is coming to an end according to Dr. Lewis S. Mudge, Philadelphia clerk of the Presbyterian general assembly, at Atlantic City before the sessions of the consolidation committee, appointed by the last general assembly to compress the fourteen boards and agencies of the church into four departments.

"The throwing aside of all restraint, brought about by the mingling of the sexes during the war days," said Dr. Mudge, "now is becoming a thing of the past. This is indicated by the passing of the short skirt and the return to popular favor of long hair. The college dances which jazz formerly reigned supreme, also are reflecting the changed spirit. The extreme styles, the indecent dancing and the pocket fash seldom are seen now at these affairs.

"In short, the moral tone of the younger generation is improving steadily. The reaction has set in and we soon will see the return to sober sanity of the pre-war days."

What becomes of his handwriting? Probably it is praised, then laid aside, to be lost or even thrown away. At first Sonny is surprised and just a little disappointed when his work is thus discarded. Then he reaches the "don't care" stage where he often throws his pictures or cardboard toys in the street on the way home. Finally his schoolwork is done in a careless, haphazard manner, for it has become a mere task to be done. There is no longer any incentive to much effort.

What can we do about it? Here is one mother's idea. Make a sufficiently large book of heavy brown wrapping paper, either sewing it together or fastening it with small clips in order that additional pages can be added as desired. Have sections for drawing, cuttings, folded articles and pictures. Let Sonny take full charge of his book, and paste in each day's work after it has had due admiration to keep it clean and safe.

He will take great care of his book, indeed he will be prouder of it than of the most expensive volume you could buy him, for this is his own, his very own, and proves to him what his young hands can do.

Then not only will Sonny himself enjoy the book, it will be a delight to younger brothers or sisters. Many an otherwise dull hour will be made bright and happy, as together they inspect its contents, and big brother remakes their favorite articles for them, just as he learned to do "in school." —Mabel R. Young.

INTERNATIONAL LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION

The interstate livestock exposition will have its annual meeting from December 2 to 9, inclusive, at Chicago. A pertinent question is, "Who made the money?" Was it the grain farmer or the farmer? We know that it was the farmer who marketed his grain through his livestock. The mission of this institution is not to make money, but to stimulate livestock interests, showing the nearest road to profits through farm products.

We are hoping our live farmers may visit this livestock exposition.

A girl shouldn't marry a boy young enough to be her son. Mrs. Corbitt, 39, of Chicago, is suing for a divorce from her 70-year-old husband, and charging that he married her for her money, and that he squandered it on young women. Verily, the discord of the world.

Kipling denies he criticised the United States in a talk with a rag, a bone and a hank of hair.

There is a big difference between offering suggestions and telling a man how to run his business.

Uncle Henry Writes to the Home Folks About the Trip to Cincinnati.

My wife, Mary, and I, had been talking for a long time about going to Cincinnati on a little visit. She had a cousin there she hadn't seen for a long time. I wanted to see the Zoo and some of the new buildings the papers were talking about.

Crops were laid by and we figured we could let the boys run the farm for a while. So we packed a big grip and started. The train had only pulled out when Mary let out a little yell. I thought it was train roars or a wreck. But she explained that she had just remembered that she had forgotten to put my extra handkerchiefs in the grip.

"Well, that's nothing to yell about," I says. "We can buy some in Cincinnati when we get in." We both laughed about it but it just goes to show how a little thing like that worries a woman.

Well, we got there about ten o'clock in the morning and went to the hotel. First thing Mary must unpack to see if she had forgotten anything else. Sure enough she found stockings and collars missing. Now ain't that like a woman? I'll bet if I packed a grip I'd make a list and check it off. Mary says I would forget to put half the things on the list. So there you are—a dead lock as they say in Congress.

We started out to look around a little before noon and maybe to buy the things she had forgotten.

I always like to walk around on Fountain Square. You can get a good drink of water there. There don't seem to be any other place to get a drink unless you go into a drug store and then you feel awkward about just asking for water when they have soda to sell.

After we had a drink, we stood and looked at the new hotel going up on the corner. My, but that's going to be some hotel when it's done. Mary, just like a woman was looking in the other direction. She was gazing at Mabley's windows of course. So she says, "Henry, we might as well go on over there and buy the things we forgot."

So, just to please her, we went on over there and went in. The young man at the door bowed and smiled the same as if we were the President and First Lady. He asked what he might do for us and I said "handkerchiefs and socks and collars." The polite young man took us over to the left of the store and called another nice young fellow and said: "Will you please show this gentleman and lady some handkerchiefs and collars and hose?"

Well, I never saw such politeness and good manners. Of course I don't have much to do with stores. That's a woman's job, I think. While we looked at collars the man asked us where we were from. When we told him he grinned and said that we ought to know him because he was born and nearly raised on the creek four miles above our farm. Well, what do you think of that? Meeting up with one of our old neighbor boys right off. Of course we remembered him and when his folks sold out and moved away. In a minute, we were good friends and he surely did wait on us fine. I said it was a happy meeting and that I never expected to see anyone from our county in a big store. The young fellow said: "Well, now folks, I'll tell you that you can find a salesman or saleswoman from almost any part of the state, right here in this store. That's why people call it the friendly store. You meet so many old friends here."

After we had bought what we needed and a new tie that Mary said I needed, I could see that she was just dying to get around and look at some of the women's fixings, so we told our friend good-bye and after that I just followed Mary.

I'd rather plow all day than traipse around in a big store but I wanted to please Mary. So we went all around and looked and Mary asked questions and priced things she had no notion of buying. Everywhere we went in that store people were polite and obliging.

We talked to one nice girl who came from our county sent and she told us about a new department on the top floor where they had fixed up just for boys and girls things. Mary said she'd have to see that because she was thinking of taking home a few little fixings for the youngsters.

We got on the elevator and rode up to the top. The girl that runs the elevator had red hair and looked lot like my son John's sweetheart but she said she was from Northeast Kentucky—and that boys and girls store is just wonderful! No store like that when I was a boy.

Well, I can't begin to tell you about the things we saw up there. Mary, she is a better hand at that kind of work and so I'll let her tell you.

*Yours Truly,
Henry.*

Must Deliver Tobacco Crop

Landlord Who Contracts With Non-Members of Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-Operative Association Must Have Tenant Join Association or He Will Be Held Responsible For All of Crop and Must See That Same Is Delivered to the Association

Considerable discussion has arisen whether or not a landlord who is a member of the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association who has tenants raising crops who are not members of the Association will be held responsible for all tobacco grown on his farm or not. This question has been taken up by the legal department of the Association and beyond question the landlord will be held responsible for all tobacco grown on his farm and it is his duty to see that his tenants join the Association.

This investigation was made by John R. Crockett and the opinion given him by the legal department.

Produce Review

A shortage in the West of special cars used to transport live poultry has had a tendency to shorten arrivals in the central and eastern markets. The lighter receipts have had a steady effect on market prices.

A good demand exists for dressed poultry, with some surplus over current requirements which is being placed in storage for future use.

The make of butter is about normal for this season and markets, after a little weakness in the middle of the week, are closing on a firmer basis. Higher prices are generally being paid for butterfat throughout the producing sections.

Not enough care and attention are being given to the quality of cream delivered to creameries, resulting in a considerable proportion of butter reaching the market that will not grade as high as it should. Better care and more frequent deliveries of cream will enable manufacturers to produce more top grade butter, and would have a tendency to raise the price of butterfat.

Production of eggs is at a low ebb and prices for fine stock have advanced during the week.

There is still a surplus of storage eggs to be marketed and withdrawals have not been quite as heavy as expected. A continued increased consumption of eggs everywhere is necessary to clear present stocks satisfactorily.
